Tabler's Hotel
Knoxville
Private

Circa 1850

Tabler's Hotel is significant to the community of Knoxville architecturally as part of the center of the town and as a building which once served as a hotel for the community.

According to the 1858 bond map of the town, a building identified as the H. B. Tabler Hotel is located in the present location of the building.

Deed research of the property shows that Louisa Tabler purchased lot #2 of Rhodes Addition to Knoxville in August of 1849 for $651.00. She continued to own the property until her death in 1881 when her brother sold part of the lot to the enterprising Knoxville businessman, Jobe M. Miller for $475.00. It is believed that it was still operating as a boarding house of some sort at this time since Louisa Tabler stated in her will that her daughter should receive "the rents of profits" of her real estate.

Today the building retains many early nineteenth century features and remains as one of the most substantial buildings in the town of Knoxville.

Tabler's Hotel is a banked two and one-half story frame building covered with asbestos siding which faces south from the north side of Route 180 in Knoxville.

The principal facade is six bays wide. Entrance doors are located in the second and fifth bays on both the ground and second levels.

Located in both bays on the first level are old if not original vertical board doors with three light transoms.

Occupying the second bay on the second level is a half paneled half windowed door which is a replacement. The fifth bay entrance has been boarded shut.

Located in the remaining bays on the first and second levels are original double hung 6/6 pegged windows, some with original glazing. Identical 6/6 windows occupy each bay on the third level as well.

A two story open porch extends across the entire front of the building. The shed standing seam tin roofed porch is supported by six square wood columns with a plain railing and tongue and groove flooring.

One small square window is located in the top of the gable on the east and west ends.

The rear facade of the building is only three bays wide and one story high. Original double hung 6/6 pegged windows occupy each bay to the rear.

The entire building is constructed on a high banked stuccoed random stone foundation with water table.

The building is covered by a replaced flank gable standing seam tin roof with single interior brick chimneys rising from the east and west gable ends.
